It was a wild and stormy night..... no, done that one. It was Wet, Wet, Wet.....

I felt it in my fingers and in between my toes..... No, cut that out, you're not going into a song while I'm here (Glanni will get that one).

Struggling with this one as Whinge, who was 'Press Ganged' into scribing the Hash Mag didn't show. What had Luscious got or doing to him that was more appealing than a wet, muddy run on a cold, dark night?

It was very wet, apparently. Well it looked it from the comfort of the Rock Inn. So wet Sam was seen upside down with a sign pointing the way to the start; Bombay, or was the sign upside down? So Wobbly and Psycho had set an international theme, Oz rules with a mention to India. By the way if anyone is thinking of taking a holiday in Zambia, just have a quick word with Psycho about her exploits trying to return home on Zambia Scareways. This explains her reluctance to Charlie's attempts to persuade her to return to the Dark Continent for a combined safari and sailing holiday with Somali pirates.

However, a bedraggled Hash eventually staggered back to the Rock and reports soon came back: Sturmeroid getting lost and being chased by donkeys; chasing donkeys knowing Sturmeroid's dislike for anything furry. He apparently defected to the Stannary Hash after being rejected by the said beasts for the rest of the run but still made it back to the Rock because he was owed a pint.

Meanwhile Windy and Racey had returned from their brief sojourn in France. Racey was thrilled with Bumsen's re-christening to Dildo and says she wants one. Say no more.....a new Hash name that is.

QC made Jerry's evening with a tale: something to do with Spikes Auntie bending over and giving him a surprise! That reminds me of my late father-in-law, Dr Peter Watt on one of his home visits to an elderly female patient on a wild and windy night. Having asked her to bend over he inserted a rectal thermometer and waited the allotted time for the temperature to register. At the appropriate moment the thermometer was withdrawn, the patient immediately responded with 'Oh thank you Vicar'. A confused Dr Watt drove home that evening intending to visit the vicar first thing in the morning.

QUIZ NIGHT

A big thank you to Steve and Diane and to all those who helped organise and run a fun night out. Some esoteric questions were posed that stretched the already over-stretched capacities of some team members.

Hurricane and Can't Remember set the scene for the Bond round with a stylish re-enactment of Gold Finger. Hurricane didn't have a Berretta in his pocket but he was still pleased to see Money Penny.

However, it was not to be the night for the half-wits who dominated pole position until the fish and chips and alcohol kicked-in. This normally conciliatory, uncompetitive and learned team of individuals were relegated to third place. They were obviously let down by their scribe's poor spelling and hand writing; an ex teacher, say no more! ASAP, aka team Lloyd came through with a blistering finish after playing a dodgy Joker and took the title. It must have been down to the brain food they were consuming. Rumour control has it that Charlie was seen tabbing performance enhancing drugs.

Can't be Arsed came in a close second with Gannet displaying her ruthless competitive side by banishing Scrotey to the '4 Plays' thus eliminating them as a threat. The 'Late Developers' left it a little too late but still came in with a very strong 6th position.

And now as we approach Christmas.....

HASH CHRISTMAS CARD

Please see Ann (K2) and sign the card, immediately after your generous donation to our two charities: The Chestnut Appeal for prostate cancer and Devon Air Ambulance. A sound investment for the majority of the men; actually come to think of it the old water works hasn't been its usually torrent lately. Kamikazes Slush and Gannet, who are looking remarkably unbuttered lately, will no doubt like to invest with the Air Ambulance.

12th Night

Sign Up, Sign Up and Pay Up please. It's time to put deposits down etc. And Spike can't start on his costume until safe in the knowledge the venue is confirmed.

Buffy's Sofa

Yes, it's Free. Just turn up and take away this William Morris inspired piece of pristine loll ability. You too can luxuriate and couch till your heart's content without spending a penny; on the price that is.
