It is with regret that I must report that the Health & Safety Executive has carried out a risk assessment of hashing and condemned it on the grounds that those taking part have no responsible adult present to ensure their safety. So here is a report on the last hash ever...

Hot Rocks has been released from A&E having had a brain transplant due to leaving most of his original one on the roof of the tunnel at double waters. Surgeons were surprised to discover a live bat hanging from his Medulla Oblongata but decided to leave it there as it had more grey matter than his new brain which was donated by Cannon Fodder. By the way Hot Rocks, Pony's medicinal muff was only a temporary gift and she wants it back (or did she say buff?)

Apparently Ernie, the Chamber Pot, is, and I quote Gannet " a happy go lucky chap who conceals some alarming vulnerabilities. He is my best mate when running near water as neither of us can swim and Ernie helps me to discover my inner coward." (Don't worry, I don't understand it either.)

Bin Liner and Fergie have made a bid for supremacy by doing the Hash Hush. They have spread a rumour that the new GM, Can't Remember, is on holiday but in fact they have kidnapped her and left her bound and gagged in the cellar of the Burrator Inn.

Another double act new to the hash are Trick and Treat. It seems that these two mutts are well under control, but if they do become unruly Whinge and Raz will take them for walkies along the coastal path.

It was my intention to delight you all with a photo and biog of the new committee but unfortunately last year's Hash Flash was so crap that there are no recent or decent photos. So, Last Minute, get flashing and take some good pics for me – asap, just in case the Hash defies the HSE and carries on regardless.

ON ON from the absent Caught Short

Stop Press... Poor Gannety has broken her wing whilst mountain biking. She is so enjoying being pumped full of morphine that she refuses to leave and has become the youngest bed-blocker in Derriford Hospital.
