Burrator Bop!

On yet another wet and windy night, intrepid Hashers gathered for yet another, fine, boggy trundle through darkest Dartmoor. Setting off from Quarry Car Park we followed well laid trails up, through, down and over hills, tracks, bridges, streams, bracken and many a slippery slope. Well done to Pimp and Hurricane for a typically tremendous Hash. It was by all accounts; endured by some, but enjoyed by all. Thank you. Yennadon Down and the wooded valley below the Dam are always such fun to scamper around.

therefore have gone, "Bothways". But no, Cheesy Bits it is. Welcome aboard ☺

In light of the Mail on Sunday's assertion that "troops will guard supermarkets" these are the units to be deployed:

Yorkshire Regiment - tea (obvs).
 Light Infantry - bulbs, batteries etc.
 Cavalry - ready meals
 Royal Navy- ladies underwear

In light of recent panic buying, UK Supermarkets have introduced purchase limits....

Tesco: 2 Hand sanitizers, 24 toilet rolls max.
Asda: 1 Hand sanitizer, 18 toilets rolls & 2kg of rice.
Co-op: 12 toilet rolls, 1kg of rice.
Aldi: 2 trumpets, 1 diving suit & a MIG welder.

Tart of the week was hotly debated, there were just so many contenders. Just like the busses of Plymouth, none for ages, then loads turn up at once. Details are scant – memory loss.. but I believe '2-Dinners' Glanni was up for one (though perhaps he should have had two, having been nominated for eating two meals at the Dalek Do (his and Biff's). While a second was awarded to Chopper for his completely brilliant Dalek outfit, worn so proudly on the night! Scrotey was also a hot contender for, he and his team of earthlings efforts manufacturing such a splendid Tardis.

Back at the pub...

Anna Taylor was christened, "Cheesy Bits" to much applause and a big smile from the lady in question. Thank goodness, it could have been so much worse! With a name such as Anna, the cleverer of you may have chosen, "Palindrome", while everyone else would

Now that everyone has been taught how to wash their hands... Next week BMW drivers are going to learn how to use their indicators.

Meanwhile, a note from tonight's Scribe....

- Thanks to the Royal Navy, I have had my shoes stuck to the stickiest carpets any nightclub the world has to offer.
- I've scrubbed toilets and decks on my hands and knees without gloves and regularly used trichloroethylene to clean beryllium filled cabinets.
- Been exposed to EMF and ionizing radiation.
- I've eaten food cooked by chefs that took a cooking course so hard none of them has ever passed it.
- Have drunk whatever hooch the locals have had to offer.
- Done press-ups in the Tamar mud, eaten with diesel and grease-covered fingers.
- Drunk diesel topped tea.
- Lived in a tiny space with some of the most disgusting toe-picking, arse-scratching, fart-mongers the world has ever experienced without fresh air or natural light.

So the coronavirus hasn't got a chance – we hope!

Moving on... AGM!!!

So tonight is the night, if you're here then it's because:

- a. You fancy a go at being on the Committee
- b. There's free food
- c. You don't fancy a go on the Committee but you're willing to fight your corner if nominated
- d. You want to mock those who do get nominated
- e. Morbid curiosity
- f. You just wanted to Hash

In actual fact, there's lots that happens on the Committee, which requires commitment from

Tamar Valley Hash House Harriers

them to make things happen and in return, commitment from everyone else to support them. TVH3 can't happen without everyone mucking in to help the corporate cause. So if you're elected (democratically of course?!), good luck with getting stuck in to keep TVH3 on the straight and narrow! If not elected, then please rally round those that have, drink beers, eat food and be merry. Wuhoo!

Good luck to the New Committee

Absolutely nothing to do with Hash, but from my friend in Canada...

On his second day without sports tv, he noticed a woman also sitting on his couch, she said she's his wife. Apparently she's quite nice!

Breaking News:

Sadly, news has just reached me saying that the first member of this group has unfortunately died because of the Coronavirus. In his house paramedics found 500 cans of assorted food, 100kg of pasta, 75kg of rice, 200 toilet rolls and 30L of hand sanitizer which he had panic bought from Lidl "just in case!"

The whole lot collapsed and buried the daft bastard!

ERRATA: Please note the Risk Assessment and Preamble linked on the Home Page remains extant.

And on that note....

On On!

And finally from Microsoft:

Has anyone tried just turning 2020 off and back on again?
