Well what an evening! The GM's jolly handover japes, the guest appearance by Bloodnock and the Hash (where did you pull that one from Grandpa!).

Well there we all were (in Bridestowe), well some of us, others were spread far and wide across the moonlit countryside of Devon, whilst a growing thong (sorry throng) were 'holed up' in the pub - more of that later.

As the longs and short bomb burst off on their respective routes, the old lags were heard to question the words of the hare - the shorts would be long and the longs longer - surely not Grandpa. It was also interesting that the young keenies were holding back clearly remembering - the shiggy, would it happen again? Would that wily old fox threaten them to another evening of crawling through Devons's morass, quagmire and tangle? However, it quickly became apparent that the long bit really did mean long, and quick, much to the delight of the younger elements. Hopefully the shiggy challenge set for Penny Farting & Co may clip the little beggar's wings next week.

After much huffing and puffing it got to the point on the run where Biff and Pimp had clearly decided enough was enough. Banking on the fact that Hurricane would be back at the car, Biff attempted to summon a lift for herself and flagging running buddy by placing a cheeky mobile call to Hurricane. The phone just rang and rang - was Hurricane ignoring the damsel in distress! No the phone was at home, nice try Biff.

As very little further dirt could be drawn from the runners, let us forward to the pub. Here the 'Drinking Club' made up of the frail and infirm were happily swelling the coffers of the landlord. The excuses of the party are getting better and more varied, ranging from 'I'm in my resting phase' to viruses et al -that you don't want to know about - mmmm.

So onto Bloodknock and his 'Committee for the Night' - really! Are there some subtle clues in some of tonight's choices - is Charlie lining you up for your chance to serve the cause? All is to be revealed so we have been promised. A sensation that was revealed by our guest GM, was that the 31st Anniversary of TVH - so Happy Birthday to us. To round off the evening I an happy to report that the freestyle Hakka team remain on top form bidding farewell to the more than merry Bloodknock.

Future Events: Remember the River Dart Camping Weekend 22nd - 24th June 2012. All families welcome. See Glani or Biff for further details.
