I AM SHIT AND I FORGOT TO DO THE HASH MAG!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

This is what Raunchy wrote for me for the hash mag when she thought I wouldn't actually get round to it however leaving it til the last minute and winging it is how I've written every essay type thing ever and I'm not going to change now. At least I'm writing it myself unlike Chopper who manages to get Raunchy to write his hash mag for him for as long as I've known about it.

As for the actual hash last week, which was set by Hot Rocks and Vampire Slayer, it will forever be remembered by me as the hottest damn run I have ever done. Seeing as on a usual hash me and most of my friends hide in the car until the last minute before changing at the start to avoid freezing in the wind, while wearing shoes that we haven't dried properly since the last hash, this time we were out as soon as possible to escape the sweatbox that was the car. This heat was especially bad for me as you'll all notice that I'm the palest person you'll ever meet and cannot handle any sort of heat whatsoever however I was convinced that it would be fine even though I was already sweating while standing in the shade.

As with most hashes that start in a car park at the bottom of a hill, the flour immediately led up the hill which myself and Deethroat tackled in the usual way by walking up it and complaining about the longs ability to run up it like it was no big deal. This was especially annoying as it wasn't just the usual fast hashers doing this but also a virgin who decided to go for the long run straight away while wearing one of the new virgin vests designed by Raunchy.

The uphill didn't last too long for the shorts thankfully as Deethroat was already complaining to me about her shorts chaffing on the way up which may have explained the speed at which she completed the rest of the hash so she could change. Continuing along back towards the road, while the longs disappeared off into the distance, we made it to a small river where it became clear the I wasn't the only one suffering from the heat as Von Trapp decided to lie down in the river front and back to cool off.

Other interesting moments from the hash included Hurricane venturing through a dark spider infested tunnel for whatever reason, Glani managing to outpace Biff the entire time even though he was walking and viewing the longs make it back with some of them looking even hotter thanks to the sun than I was. This was especially true for Borat who decided to take his top off by the end of the hash which definitely distracted Deepthroat.

After the hash at the pub we were treated to seeing Biff in holiday mode complete with wetsuit and snorkelling gear while still maintaining a certain degree of professionalism maybe to remind everyone that she was GM after Raunchy attempted takeover the week before.

It was a very busy Hash Hush this week as Biff had a lot of achievements to commend including K2 who had completed 1200 hashes and was presented with some champagne for her efforts and has also become a celebrity after starring in an advert for Black Farmer Sausages. Anal Vice was also presented with a teapot as reward for completing 100 hashes and Wobbly Knob was also brought out to the front to celebrate his cycling of 105 miles which is definitely much further than I will ever go on a bike.

That's about as much as I can remember of the evening even with the use of my terrible notes on my phone so I'll leave it there other than some information about a walk that I was asked to put in. Finally I'm looking forward to seeing how much of my shirt survives the wedding hash that's currently being set by Raunchy and Embarrister which should be slightly cooler than last weeks.
