Hello everyone, Blossom here, what do you mean- who the _____ is Blossom? - remember me? A lot of you may care not to, others really just have not been around long enough. To remind you, over 800 runs completed- many memorable committee stints (mainly has flash due to the fact I am a bit daft but also a bit artistic). I have completed a karrimoor, with my trusty pal Batty and once ran Bideford half marathon In 1hr 36mins. And my reward for all this is knackered knees but who wants to rust out when you can have fun wearing out.

Pork hill car park

After a blustery overcast day the sun came out revealing the fantastic Dartmoor landscape we are all lucky enough to have in our back yard. The hash gathered, an eclectic mix of mad, bad and just glad to be let out, since my last Hash outing there was so much new blood I didn't know where to look, (first).

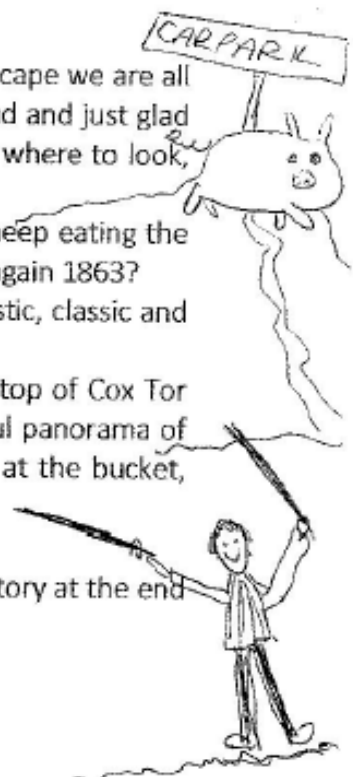

"Sturmer one stocking" addressed the masses with some sort of excuse about the sheep eating the dust- twice! Think you used that one last time you and Batty set a run, when was that again 1863? I didn't do the run but my glamorous assistant Lost said "It was a cracking run, fantastic, classic and may well be remembered until next week's run at least".

Looking for someone to walk with, Psycho caught my eye and herded me up to the top of Cox Tor with the aid of a couple Nordic walking poles. So engrossed were we by the beautiful panorama of the surrounding countryside and putting the world to rights we were the last back at the bucket, sorry Wobbly and Lost.

Won't bore you TOO much but subjects we covered were:

1. The depressing content of the T.V news, we don't even get a heart- warming story at the end anymore.

2. Addiction versus compulsion.
 3. Bad knees, back, ankles, shoulders, hips, breath.....delete as applicable
 4. The Great British Bake off- we just love it. Paul Hollywood can knead my buns any day!
- And finally, worryingly Psycho keeps an eye on her off-spring's social life with binoculars!

PUB CHAT

Gannet was telling me scrotey was shocked while using their second floor loo to find one of their puss cat's pop its head through the open window (very brave), then he remembered the scaffolding. What is it this time, under pinning, over pinning, dry rot, rising damp, death watch beetle, walnut worm or concrete cancer?

Hurricane declared "They have yet to invent a bicycle saddle to suit Can't remember's nether regions" I know the feeling - OUCH! (Don't you just love exclamation marks?)

Psycho and Pimp spent a few hours in Derriford hospital casualty department, not a planned meeting but both had a child, of the grown up variety needing medical attention after separate seaside related accidents involving surf boards-spooky.

Hotlips and Doghouse popped in from a family camping trip leaving the au-pair and little un's back in the tent, good plan!

Happy birthday Luffley!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!(Exclamation marks look like upside down candles!)

Can't remember opened a can of worms by mentioning The Von trap's peculiar route choice to the Hash start, from Plymouth to Cox tor via Princetown? Wung hung low agreed this was the best route as it avoids the wiggles. Lost and I live in Horrbridge and travelled through Tavistock to get to the start....anymore suggestions? Keep them to yourselves.

On that note thank you for reading this twaddle and keep on doing what you're doing. (That does NOT include you whinge). NAUGHTY BOY!

May the road rise with you.
