As I lumbered down the languid paths ankle deep in mud, brashings and brambles my thoughts drifted back to a wee verse

“To see the world in a lane of mud,
And heaven in a trampled wild flower,
Hold infinity in the beam of your torch,
Then eternity will feel like it lasted this hour”

Needing to get away from this lost innocence of Auguries I thumbed my mobile to see what had been going on in Twitter.

@Mayhem Got a really good run planned can get some help	Reply
@Sshobo I can help I know of some really bad brambles and un-runnable paths it will be dark as well!	Retweet

@Sshobo It will be fine we need to cull a few, I'm known for it.

@Sturmeroid Sturmeroid stock car on site, only killed a few animals on this trip, lucky not to park in that deep mud!

@9 inch Should of gone with Stan & Harry

My mind turned over feet and arse laying prostrate in the mud I drifted into verse

Car appears, cars with light,
To those poor soles of trainers tonight,
But did human form display,
The love of grip needed today.

Turning off the phone I had warmed up and sprinted back to the car gazelle like laying waste to all that stepped in front of me. Feeling warm and "goodly" back at the car I watched the masterful skills of our band of merry drivers blast out of their parking spaces and head towards the smallest village this side of the Tamar.

The pub larger than the whole village had a friendly feel, one local eating, paper spread out glass of wine at the ready snarled when told quite a few customers would be in soon.

From the back room came the clipped voice of a posh Can't remember, after guzzling her g&t's and eying the three pints lined up in front started shouting foook and other unprintable things, then trying not to be banned, passed it off as exploiting the virtues of "Call the midwife" TV program (on the same time as top gear, for blokes) with the pudding club. Congrats on the engagement for H and Delilah wedding in how many months?

The throng settled into the bar battle to get pint's order food, then go and find what their friends want to drink while leaving the barsteward unable to do anything until they return change the order then pay by credit card, not know your pin so have to put on glasses, check your phone for the number that's always a corruption of a birthday. Well at least their happy. Landlord looks on incredulously.

Sturmeroid is now happy beer has mended his arm and is giving full action replays of his crash on flat level ground.

(Where there's blame there's a claim) Gannet is searching info on her pussy, one seems fatter than the other! (Try cutting down the Felix) While Whinge insists his ears are smaller than Lushes (It's all true)

By this time Wobbly Knob and Moonville arrived with the poor lost souls that did an extra 2 miles the excuse seemed as lightly as Ram Raiders 'A sheep just backed into me!' I drifted off to sleep while a likely story was presented, with a shout of bolox from the background.

Hash Hush time while I just managed to get to the bar, unable to hear so I checked Twitter Again.

@Geepee I have two announcements the quiz nite on Sat for the illuminati only £15.00 each selling fast. Our hash do has an Olympic theme and will be held on March 3rd cost £6.50. We have a band 'Black Friday' only 70tickets.

Haaaassshhh Naaammmming

You have to be cleverer and use less than 150 characters

This made me laugh out loud, the naming went on for a few hours and some poor sod ended up being called Miss Smelt, melt, Felt or spelt.

@lost Eeyore is in a very sad condition, it's his birthday & nobody has taken any notice." A. A. Milne, born today - 1882

After this it was time for bed.
