The Hash

Ok so last week's hash was as good as it gets, something for everyone, the afternoon was pleasant and warm but just as we turned up for the hash it turned into the normal "Hound of the Baskervilles" weather, misty, bleak and getting cold. Many thanks to Paul & Amy for setting a challenging Hash, I have never seen such long "check backs", by the time I had returned from the first check with "Omen", the rest of the longs were over the next hill!!!

Being out on the moors in any weather is such a great adventure and now with the evenings drawing out it is such a pleasure to run in the daylight. Heading first of all back towards Princetown on the access track from South Hessary then down across the open moors towards Norsworthy Bridge via the Trig point above Older Bridge. A lot of faffing about looking for the dust in the old tin workings below the Devonport Leat then on through the tin workings and on to Nuns Cross Farm.

A cunning detour down towards Whiteworks along the Devonport Leat loured us away from the warmth of the cars and the pub but when we followed the dust to a check, we decided to overrun it and head back to Peat Cott and the "On Home". The weather had improved during the hash, and we headed west back towards the cars we were presented with the most spectacular sunset over North Hessary tor. Many thanks to Paul and Kate for the use of their photos.

The Sumer Solstice weekend.

The "Sumer Solstice" weekend is now taking shape, the venue was visited by some of the committee over the weekend. Bachelors Hall is a fantastically appointed lodge, it is divided into small dormitories for 6-8 people, it is warm and comfortable with modern showers and toilet facilities. Good Wi-Fi and a modern kitchen. The outside space has great potential for fun, games a BBQ, and a fire pit for evening warmth.

The plan is to arrive soon after lunch on the Saturday for fun games and events that are planned for Saturday afternoon and evening, a good breakfast on the Sunday with a walk on the moors. If the weather is good the fun will be outside if not there is a great common room.

The access to Bachelors hall is from Tor Royal over an unmade track through three open and shut gates to the hall but once there it has sufficient parking for all and room for those with Campers who wish to bring them, but pleas by Prior Notification.

The cost will be £5 per head for the weekend. Please let Scrotey and Naughty Boy know if you would like to come for the weekend?

There are a series of photos to show what the Hall is like that will be available in the pub after the hash for the next few weeks.

Many thanks
