Huge pressure scribing this week following on from the English guru that is Gannet. So maybe I should write a load of old tripe to reduce the pressure to be nowhere near her standards!

Speaking of Tripe I tried Tripe soup recently, a Romanian favourite apparently, tripe swimming in fatty liquid and garlic, however I would say that it rates somewhere along the same standard as silk worm. Should anyone feel some strange urge to try it then I strongly suggest you don't!

Let's be honest, although it was a beautiful day, who didn't feel sorry for Biff and Glanni of the Arctic for having to lay the hash in those brrrrrr degrees temperatures. Pat on the backs to both! Im sure Biff would rate it as being a two cats on the bed night!

When asking how the hash was the word 'Hard' was used to describe it by numerous hashers on this occasion. Not the actually hash, but the terrain, frozen solid! Pist N Broke gave me a fine description, something about running on tarmac that had been peppered with shot from a cannon! Fairly accurate. However, many hashers were grateful that for the first time ever they went home with clean shoes! There were also reports of cold buttocks! Clearly people need to fatten up.

Rumour has it that the shandy froth on the bucket had frozen too, which clearly suggests there is a too low alcohol content and more needs to be included. Maybe we need to move from beer/Lager to something a little stronger, Brandy? Malibu? Maybe Port so as to be civilised?

The highlight for the non-hashing hashers was seeing a line of torches running along the horizon (is there a horizon if it's totally dark) on a beautiful evening, and then a shooting star appearing over them. Psycho described it as like a handkerchief floating down.

Rumour has it she and Wobbly have been drinking too many Jagertee's in Austria so think she may be hallucinating? (Jagertee (also Jägertee) is an alcoholic beverage made by mixing overproof rum with black tea, red wine, plum brandy, orange juice and various spices)

Whilst there was a pretty good turnout there were a lack of people from Plimmuff. Apparently too cold for those city slickers! Come on metropolis dwellers, too cold, too far?

Lost arrived at the hash in style in a car which he had 'borrowed'.. Hmmm. He seems to make a habit of this 'borrowing'... however like a small child he was overcome with excitement by the fact that not only did the mini have lights in the external door handles but it also had its own version of an OHP and projected the Mini logo onto the floor outside the driver's door. He confirmed that he was going to task Blossom to lie on her back to find out where it was coming from when he got home. I think he was still talking about the car?

Welcome to TVH3 virgin Tom, he bravely turned up on his own and survived to tell the tale! He knows E-Coli apparently so maybe he will be named septicaemia or giardia?

Speaking of names, Julie, now named Bumless is now to be added to the list! Self-naming, no hash abuse or heckling, what's going on?

H+S Warning – Hot Rocks has had a cold, apparently there are no snot filtration systems in the brewery so should any one find a different flavour it could be Holes Snot or Porter mucus? Vampire slayer reports they have self-sacrificed themselves to save the beer however, by moving all the blankets and duvets to the brewery to keep the beer at the right temperate whilst they froze! Beer drinkers, be grateful! (For the warmth not the snot)

OLYMPICS NEWSFLASH – OLYMPICS NEWSFLASH – OLYMPICS NEWSFLASH

For those who have been watching the Olympics you may have missed the ultimate British monumental achievement. Scrotey, for the first time ever, representing himself, was first back on the longs, yes, he finished back to the bucket before Hot Rocks.

However, a reminder to all that the hash is not a competitive sport and all about being part of the group so next week someone please trip him up and make sure he is at the back!

Scupper Sucker was also embracing good gamesmanship and has taken up guide running for the blind, assisting Dodo in his time of need due to his temporary impairment.

Naughty boy was given his 100 runs teapot, he attempted a down down however it really did go down, down on the floor and all over the GM's jacket much to everyone's amusement. A trick teapot maybe? Mwah ha ha

I had a bit of down time and decided to do something creative so this week there is a bonus hash mag, hash dingbats (ish) for some entertainment. No prize other than your pride if you get them all! And yes, should you get stuck, I will tell you the answers.

On On
