Well my fellow hashers you will be reading this tucked up in the warmth and comfort of the Whitty enjoying well-earned refreshment after THE BEST HASH EVER IN THE HISTORY OF WELL.....WHENEVER! ALL HAIL TO DILDO AND NIPPLY FOR THEIR SUPREME EFFORTS, BRAZEN SKILL AND INSPIRATION!

Despite being utterly outshone by the genius of this week's hash, many thanks and a brief report of the proceedings last week where Naughty Boy and Dirty Oar did their best in challenging conditions to set a most enjoyable trot around the arboretum, up Down Tor, down Down Tor and then generally back to the car park. In other times it would have been worthy of great praise were it not for the spectacular brilliance of the hash that came after it.

Indeed there were some tender moments - chiefly involving Hurricane's butt-ox which have been poorly sore and giving him some gip these months past. Can't Remember has totally given up massaging them with an ancient mixture of olive oil, cloves, anchovies and Wensleydale cheese - allegedly because it was having no effect but mainly because of the mess. She therefore told him to get off his damn Nigel Colwill and do a run. He duly did and was rewarded with Tart of the Week. Don't forget people - this coveted prize will only be available for another five weeks so hone your diva skills to gain one of the last few!

There were again some virgins (who'd have thought it in Devon....) who enjoyed the hash but did not bring a change of clothes to go to the pub. Members of the committee are delegated to advise them to bring clothes and especially money to buy BEER, BEER and MORE BEER. They should not be fooled by the great Nashers who was daintily supping tea - this was only because the glue was drying on her new year set of false teeth and she will be back to full biting strength soon.

On the subject of clothing, newbies should be warned of dressing up as members of the biking fraternity who pitch up occasionally on the misunderstanding that we like them. Lost was there in his fluorescent turquoise crinoline biking romper suit with full lunch pack (one thing that is not lost then....). Also one Ram Raider appeared to regale us with his tales of spliced gears, sweaty saddles and dented helmets - as if we care? You may have noticed he only shows up on the extremely rare and otherwise understandable occasions that the English rugby team lose a match, so he can gloat. All I can say to that is: IRELAND 24 - WALES 14 HA HA HA. It is all noted in the cosmic record and come the revolution a raid will not be the only thing that gets rammed.

Gannet is desperate. To sell some more Posh Frocks tickets that is - don't miss your chance to buy a ticket and make your meal choices by 21 February at the very latest.

And finally a happy/sad note - we said cheerio to Phil and Sarah who are moving on from the Burrator Inn after 14 years of looking after hashers and various other ne'er-do-wells in the area. They have been great hosts and landlords and we all wish them the very best for their retirement. Posh Pinny got them a nice engraved chopping board which they can use to hit any passing cyclists in their new home.

Right that's it - apologies to Gannet for the poor grammar, syntax, over-use of capitalisation, weak characters and mild racism (to the Welsh), but that's what you get if you must scribe and concentrate on preparing a truly wonderful hash at the same time.
